

Thank you

Participating in clinical research benefits public health and advances medical knowledge.

This card was prepared by the Center for Information & Study on Clinical Research Participation (CISCRP), an independent non-profit organization focused on educating and informing the public about clinical research participation. CISCRP is not involved in recruiting patients for clinical trials, nor is it involved in conducting clinical research.

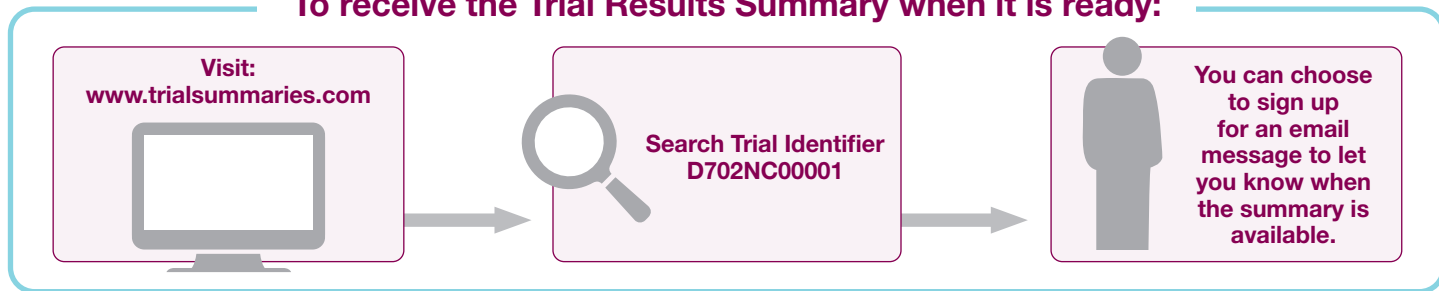

The Act of Participation

We thank you and the millions of other people who participate in clinical trials each year.

Your clinical trial is sponsored by AstraZeneca. It is being carried out by doctors, scientists, trial coordinators, and trial participants across the country. Together with other participants, you make it possible to find out if the drug rilvegostomig in combination with chemotherapy is safer and more effective than standard advanced biliary tract cancer treatment.

WHEN THE CLINICAL TRIAL ENDS, a summary of the overall trial results will be made available to you online through the www.trials summaries.com website. This website doesn't collect, store, or use information that could be used to identify you.

To receive the Trial Results Summary when it is ready:

We hope the summary helps you and all of the participants understand and feel proud of your important role in advancing medical science. If you do not have access to the internet or need a printed copy, please let your site staff know.
